

Shortened Attention Span Festival

OPENED

June 5, 2008

CLOSED

June 29, 2008

Week 3 (Reviewed by Richard Hinojosa, June 19, 2008)

The Music Room by Elizabeth Bove. This play is quite interesting. A woman, played convincingly by Laurie Muir, is checking out a potential apartment in Manhattan for herself and her husband. The realtor is an arrogant sort of guy played very well by Michael Siktberg. They chat a little about her past and we discover that she was once a musician with lots of promise but gave it up to raise a family, so the realtor shows her the music room and boasts that a composer once lived there. Bove gives us a great turnaround at the end and the dialogue and acting are very good.